

Abstract

A method and apparatus for facilitating the development and management of web sites. A web page generator includes applications for controlling web page operations or semantics and a plurality of templates for controlling the appearance of a web page. A templates manager object establishes Template Set Objects and Template Objects for each application on a dynamic basis. Applications use this dynamic hierarchy to identify specific templates for use, even templates in the same or different applications with the same name.